

1 A section

Ordinary body text before the run-in heading, long enough that the line above the heading is set the same way on both sides.

A run-in heading. The paragraph heading is set in bold, run into the first line of its paragraph, with a fixed skip above it and a word space after it. Real solutions, proofs and notes use it constantly.

A second one. And the text that follows it.