

A paragraph containing the printer’s curly apostrophe, typed as the UTF-8 character rather than as an ASCII quote: don’t, won’t, the reader’s eye. Also the matching quotation marks: “the quoted phrase” and ‘a nested one’.

A second paragraph so the line above has something to align against.